

Fausto's Bedroom

called the "Room of the Valtellinese Bed"

Let's go into Fausto's bedroom, now. Wow, look at what a beautiful bed he had! If you get close to the foot of the bed, you'll see a battle scene.

This whole scene was carved! The artist used tiny chisels to carve the figures in the wood.

What do you see on the nightstand to the right of the bed? There are two skulls. One is an oil lamp. Can you tell me what the other one is?

Now look up at the ceiling. There's another crest: a little shoe. Do you know why the brothers decided to use a shoe? Because in the Milanese dialect, a shoemaker is called a "bagatt," just like the name Bagatti Valsecchi!

Answer: a clock
